Summary

Results of agricultural restructuring implemented over the past 5 years show that Thanh Liem district has initially obtained general achievements in its economic development and structural transformation towards declining share of the agriculture, raising share of the industrial, capital construction and services sectors. Sub-sectors of the agriculture have been reallocated, including expansion of husbandry and aquaculture, reduction of cultivation activities; many institutional and policy solutions were implemented to promote the development of some new commodities, to increase the land concentration for expanding the scale of production; cooperation with hi-tech application agricultural was done to build up some agricultural value chains. However, the results show modest effects and limited scope. For this reason, this study proposes 5 main solutions in order to accelerate the agricultural structuring of Thanh Liem district, Ha Nam province in a faster and more sustainable way in the coming time.
